The Finance Question Follows Manhattan Club's Members Very Mme. Duse's Success.

Hoyt's Plays Temporarily Cease, Schaefer and Slosson Put Up $1,000 Owing to His Wife's Funeral,

The artistic success of Eleonora Duse beginning to look at the vulgar side of difficulties, and at a meeting last night it the question, and to wonder whether the Rosenfelds will make money. Said tions towards the fund of $200,000 amounted well-known manager: "A great many | now to $125,000. There was joy in the hearts datakes have been made with this of the hembers when Charles M. In the first place, the fact that she who has had charge of the big creditors of vill only give four performances a week | the Club, declared that he had succeeded in is a serious handicap. Business must be enormous in order to make up for this. In the second place, the absence of a Saturday matinee performance is unpardonable. Duse should have played Saturday afternoon rather than Saturday night. The class of theatre-goers to whom she appeals never visits a playhouse Saturday night. That evening is set aside for the working people. It is for this reason that grand opera is sleways given Saturday afternoon, and never Saturday night. Duse might have worn some of her splendid jeweiry in "Camille." This part rendered the display perfectly legitimate, and American women like that kind of thing. It is a pity, perhaps, to record this, but it is a fact. Duse never wore a jewelnot even a ring. Now, has she come here for glory or for money? She can get as much glory as she wants, but I rather think she wants the cash. Duse can be a big financial success, if her mangers go about it in the right is a serious handicap. Husiness must be enormous in order to make up for this. date all outstanding debts immediately and

Joseph Haworth said last night that the version of the "Demi-Monde" that he intends presenting was made by Mrs. Frank Leslie, and has simply been touched up by his brother William. Mr. Haworth may do the piece at the Union Square.

Harry Conor, Geraldine McCann, Earl King, Claude Goodwin, and a number of other people from the Madison Square Theatre went to New Hampshire to attend the funeral of Mrs. Charles H. Hoyt yesterday. There was no performance of "A Trip to Chinatown" last night, and the Park and Tremont Theatres in Boston, where "A Temperance Town" and "A Texas Steer" are running, were also dark.

H. B. Conway, the actor who was blamed, and with a very good show of reason, for the failure of Mrs. Bernard-Beere in this country, has reached England, and a London journal says: "H. B. Conway, who has been for some little time in California, growing grapes with some success, is now back in London, having decided to return to his oid love—the stage." What a pity Conway cannot grow grapes in London!

E. J. Henley only lost his faith in "Capt. Herne, U. S. A." when the absolutely unanimous opinion of the metropolitan press was indorsed by the theatre-going public. One of the friends said to him, buoyantly: "Henley, old man, I've seen 'Capt. Herne,' and I like it. There's money in it."

"Yes," assented Henley, sorrowfully, "I put it there."

"I put it there."

Here, ladies, is a description of Mrs. Kendal's atest dress, worn in "A White Lie" in London. It sounds somewhat involved, but it is probably all right, and you, at any rate, will understand it. She wore "a beautiful gown of cerulean blue cashmere, edged round the bottom of the long plain skirt, with a narrow band of black passementerie; the same outlined the fronts of the bodies which disclosed a vest of soft pale blue silk. The sleeves were of the latter, and a sush consisting of one long d, cut on the slant, fell down the left ide. The back of the corsage was outlised at the waist with a band of black passementerie, which was continued down the front. At her throat, a bunch of crimson and plak roses secentuated the beauty of the blue background."

It is said that "The Isle of Champagne" wants to get an Inning there; it is asserted that Rice's "1492" company is positively yearning for such an opportunity, and it has been announced with perfect gravity that John Stetson will give a guarantee, if he can put his "Crust of Society" there. Stetson's one thought now seems to be "The Crust of Society."

There were two interesting revivals last night. One was "The Foresters" at Daly's Theatre, and the other was "Ingomar" at the Star. Of Daly's elaborate production enough as already been written to fill volumes. Tennyson's poem set to Sir Arthur Sullivan's music will have no more exquisite prose than that written to full volumes. Tennyson's powil set to Sir Arthur Sullivan's music will have no more exquisite prose than that supplied by Mr. Daly. Miss Behan repeated her admirable interpretation of Maid Marian, and Arthur Bourchier was the Robin Hood, the role that John Drew created. There was a large and delighted audience. At the Star Theatre Mrs. Gale-Haynes made a charming Parthenia. Her work is conscientious. She is an industrious actress rather than a great artist.

Simple Method of Judging Its Purity for Domestic Use.

Pure water can always be told from the many by a few very simple tests, says the Indianapolis News.

To judge of the color, fill a colorless glass bottle with the water, look the distinctness with which this can be seen gives an idea as to the proportion of clay or sand it contains. Then bound the highly and set it in a warm place for a day.

Remove the cork and smell the air in the bottle. If there is an offensive of cor, however slight, the water is unfit for domestic use, and should be respected. It often happens that well water, no matter how bright and sparkling contains large quantities of putrescent matter.
